

USING GOOGLE TRANSLATE

Most theological articles are written in English, so students in the Chinese and Spanish language programs at DTS sometimes need a translation service. Google software provides translations that are approximate but often helpful. Here is one way to use Google to translate articles you find in ATLA or other databases.

1. Download an article.
2. Go to <https://translate.google.com>
3. Pick the "Document" tab.
4. Pick the "Browse your computer" link
5. Upload the pdf to Google

It may be difficult for students in the Chinese and Spanish language programs to decide which articles to translate. Abstracts (summaries) help. The following databases provide abstracts of articles in English.

- Old Testament Abstracts
- New Testament Abstracts
- Religious and Theological Abstracts

Search those databases and copy some abstracts. Go to Google translate, pick the "Text" tab, and paste many of the abstracts into Google translate. Google will allow a maximum of 5000 characters at one time.
